minnow taking the place of the whale."

ROOSEVELT'S INSULTING WORDS.
In speaking of the people of the South, he said that twenty-five years after Appomattox, Roosevelt in one of his publications had declared that until out of the dictionary was stricken the word treason. Jefferson Davis would be au arch-traitor. That, he said, was a strike at the whole South and the Confederate solidiers. He also referred to another publication of Mr. Rooseevit's, in which he is quoted as saying that throughout South ern character there ran a streak of coarse and brutal barbarism. He compared "the kind, loving words of Mc Kinley" in an address to Confederat vewerans to "the insuling words of Roosevelt."

He said that in one of his books, Fres-ident Roossvelt "deliberately teaches and advocates lynchings for the stealing of a "ragtall Texas pony." He asked it that book did not have something to do with stimulating "the great people of the North to lawlessness."

The people of the South condemn lynch-

The people of the South condemn lynching for all crimes, because the hand of civilization and Christianity had been lifted against it. No man in the civil-zed world over, however, he said, would condone outrages against women," and yet we don't preach lynching or teach it, but knowing the weakness of human nature, mobs cannot be controlled in sparsely settled communities where we cannot get sufficient police force on the spot at once."

PRESIDENT ADVOCATED LYNCH

He believed that every Democrat and Republican in the country would pause in shame that the President of the United States had scattered books advo-

He closed by quoting from "American Ideals," in which Mr. Roosevelt, he alleged, had denounced General Grosvenor by name "as a champion of foul government and dishonest politics." Then turning to General Grosvenor, he added: "Read that and then read your recent speech defending the President, and tell the House that you feel like thirty cents."

the House that you feel like thirty cepts."

General Grosvenor admitted that four years ago he opposed the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt for Vice-President, but said Mr. Roosevelt during the campaign had conducted himself in a dignified manner and had won the confidence and esteem of the people by his acts from the time he was elected to preside over the Senate, and that he reached the supreme heights when he declared at Buffalo, that he would carry out the policies of McKinley. Since then the President had grown to be one of the greatest men of the country. The President, he said, was more dangerous to the Democratic party than any other man to-day. The Democratic in New York, he said, had launched a candidate for President who did not know where he stood, on his head or his heels. Preceding this episode, the House de-

WASHINGTON. D. C., April 22.—The general deficiency appropriation bill occupied the major portion of the Senate's time to-day, but before it was taken up, Mr. Gallinger spoke at some length on the tariff policy of the Republican party, saying the tariff would be an issue in 1994. While reading of the deficiency bill was in progress, Mr. Cultom delivered a speech on the House Chinese exclusion rider.

He expressed the opinion that there should be explicit legislation re-enacting exclusion laws. should be explicit legislation re-enacting exclusion laws.

During the day the attention of the Senate was brought to the amendment of the House to the bill for the government of the canal zone and some embarrassment was created by naming Mr. Gorman as Democratic conferes on behalf of the Senate in place of Mr. Morgan, who is the senior Democratic member of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, with the result that both senators declined to serve.

Mr. Gorman, in declining to serve asked that Mr. Morgan be named in his place.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
SUFFOLK. VA. April 22.-To more firmly cement the sections to accord recognition to those who fought for the South, and at the same time to lend self-assertiveness to the section from which Democracy always draws a solid phalanx, a number of his friends and admirers in Virginia and North Carolina are urging General W. P. Roberts, of the latter State, to stand for the vice-presidential nomination on the Democratic ticket. It is contended that General Roberts's record in affairs of war, State and politics, peculiarly fit him for the position, and that to start a movement looking to his nomination would be in keeping with the frequently expressed sentiment that it is time for the South to obliterate her policy of self-effacement.

General Roberts, who was in Suffolk to-day, was spoken to about the matter, but as yet would make no positive declaration of his candidacy. Though in favor of the South having a place on the ticket.

but as yet would make no positive declaration of his candidacy. Though in favor of the South having a place on the ticket, he said there were bigger men than he who should be put on. It is thought, though, that he may be induced to accept when he has had more time for deliberation.

General Roberts formerly was State auditor of North Carolina, and was consel to Victoria, B. C., under the administration of President Cleveland. He was a gallant soldier, and was the youngest general in the Confederate army, being commissioned as brigadier-general at the age of twenty-three years. He is a fine physique and commanding figure.

Ine Moon's Craters.

It is estimated from recent photographs of the craters and crateries of the moon that they are over 20,000 in number, Professor Pickering think that the white patches in some craters and the numerous bright radiating lines are due to snow, and the less conspicuous lunar cannis, which gradually appear, increase and tade away, in the lunar day, are attributable by the same authority to yegetation.
